A beautiful older example of an Azilal with a well balanced symmetrical lozenge network. Horizontal rows of female fertility symbols and male protection symbols include the cross motif, triplet, and bars. Woven with a linear construction of interspersed hand knots between rows of weft, allowing a natural warm taupe ground to peek through in some areas. Pile colors include sea green, bright yellow, faded pink, and natural dark brown. Some non-woolen dyed fibers present, typical of many Azilals.
